

Is it proper to offer people etiquette advice if they have not asked for it?

It all depends on the purpose! If the advice you are offering is helpful and will save the person from embarrassment then it is acceptable. However, if the advice is to point out the person's misstep or will cause embarrassment then it is not only improper but rude.